

Back To School

The 2011-12 academic year got under way at Al-Ameen Private School with usual zest and fervor post summer holidays. At Al Ameen we believe in the development of our staff as the development of our staff means development of our pupils and institution. Keeping this in mind an induction program was held for all our new staff members in order to welcome and abreast them of the team, their roles and assignments.

Rest of the staff resumed the school from 4th September 2011. They were welcomed by the principal Mrs. Fatima Martin and members of the SLT. An ice breaker activity was conducted where four different sayings and proverbs were pasted on the walls and staff members were asked to stand by the proverb which inspired them the most. Then they were then asked to share a few words with the rest of their colleagues on why a particular proverb impressed them the most.

Later various professional development sessions were held for the teachers conducted by Mrs.F. Martin, Mrs. Z. Munir and Mrs.S. Pitale. These training sessions keep teachers updated with new trends and devise new strategies, techniques and methods for setting up classroom challenges. The overriding idea behind professional development is that increased knowledge helps teachers improve student achievement. This included different department meetings where the school action plan and its expectations and outcomes were reviewed.

The next day all the teachers with the help of our support staff got their classrooms ready to welcome our students on 6th September. The senior leadership team was reviewing the various departmental action plans and meeting new teachers to facilitate them further in understanding the procedures.

The students in their crisp uniforms and buoyant mood started school on 6th September 2011. The excitement of their new classrooms, meeting their teachers, friends and all the chutzpah of a new academic year was evident. As students returned to their classrooms the teachers welcomed them and introduced themselves. The procedures and rules for classrooms were set on the first day so as to avoid any confusion later. A welcome session was also held during the day to synergize the students and the new staff.
